In Pitman, you write the consonant sounds first to form a shorthand

"outline" and then, if necessary, mark in the vowels. In many instances, no vowel marks are necessary.

Vowels should, however, be marked in full the first time a proper name is mentioned (or if the name has an unfamiliar and bring them up to date, being able to do this is becoming ever more important for shorthand writers. You do not need to know all the niceties of the theory when first learning, but the more you know, the better you will be able to write new words, either ones not in the dictionary or when no dictionary is available.

the English language developed by Englishman Sir Isaac Pitman, who first presented it in 1837. Like most systems of shorthand, it is a phonetic system; the symbols do not represent letters, but rather sounds, and words are, for the most part, written as they are spoken. As of 1996, Pitman shorthand was
