The Angry Buddhist Seth Greenland

The Angry Buddhist is set against the backdrop of a brutal congressional race in Palms Springs. It's a tale populated with stinking ambitions, rotten politicians, corrupt public servants, desperate lovers, dead dogs, a tragically dysfunctional family and the impact of too much booze or no booze. The great Homer Simpson once said, "Ah, alcohol."

This is the perfect combination of people and place for Seth Greenland, one of America's finest satirists. The Angry Buddhist swirls together the character-derived humor of an Elmore Leonard tale with the clear-eyed suspense of a James M. Cain noir. It convincingly explores mendacity in its many modern American forms: contemporary politics, middle class sexual mores, the criminal justice ...
